SUMMARY

A cantonment and barracks area is located immediately east of the village of Lagernyy, 7 kilometers (km) southeast of the town of Soldatskaya, and 4 km west of the city of Prokhladnyy (Figure 1).

The cantonment occupies 250 acres and contains 9 storage buildings, 5 barracks, an administration building, and 3 small general purpose buildings. The southwestern part of the cantonment and an area to the east appear prepared to accommodate approximately 130 squad tents. Several times this number could be placed in the remaining areas of the facility.

The barracks area occupies 150 acres and contains 5 administration buildings, 18 barracks, 4 general storage buildings, 2 motor parks, a vehicle repair shop, 7 vehicle sheds, 2 small general purpose buildings, and a small-arms range. Between the cantonment and the barracks

Only 3 usable photographic missions were available--a [redacted] mission of [redacted] [redacted] missions of [redacted]

[redacted] None of the photography indicates a high level of activity, especially in the cantonment, but both the cantonment and barracks area appear to be well maintained. The areas to the north and east of the cantonment were being used for small-unit tactical training in 1957, as evidenced by trenches, rifle pits, and weapons emplacements. In 1964 these features had disappeared and the wheeled-vehicle driver-training area had partially replaced them. Two additional barracks have been constructed in the cantonment since 1957. A playing field was discernible in 1957 but this had been obliterated in 1964.
